Sectussopra Spell

This spell was reportedly invented in 1976 by Severus Snape, who was then a student of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry.

The incantation is pronounced "sectum-sepm-pror," with the stress on the third syllable. The spell implies a cutting charm which has permanent effects and cannot be entirely reversed.

The wand-movement should be swift and decisive and give the feeling of a slash at your chest with a blade. The wand should come to rest at the main impact of the eyes with the chest.

The most effect is a deep wound which will be most painful and disfiguring.

The effect of the spell can be compared to a number of blades cutting about an inch deep into the skin at the impact point and then radiating outwards.
